It gives youthful vigor. Insist on having Pabst's "Best" Tonic. For sale by the bottle, dozen or cask (8 dozen) by

HOBSON DRUG CO. Druggists.

Insufficient Data.

The inquisitive passenger had hinted around until his patience had worn out, so he asked the dignified passenger, "What is your business?" The dignified one answered him, "I am a lung specialist." The inquisitive man was quiet for awhile; then he broke out again: "Say, I just happened to think," he said. "Did you mean you are a doctor or a prizefighter?" — Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Money Question.

"Mamie," said Maud, "have you studied the financial question any?" "I've read the headlines in the newspapers." "What kind of money do you want, silver or gold?" "I want gold," was the prompt reply. "Gold dollars make such lovely bangles, and maybe they'll come in style again." — Washington Star.

Working in Districts.

The burglar on the outside thrust his head cautiously in through the window. "Hi, there," he said in a hoarse whisper to the masked man on the inside, "you git out of here. If you want to do business in this part of town, you go three blocks below. This row of buildings is in my territory." — Chicago Tribune.

Rural Note.

"They are talking of putting in long distance telephones for the farmers' use." "How charming! Of course they can be utilized in calling the cows." — Chicago Record.

Since Biddy's Got a Bike.

There's a century between us And the day that, down the pike, We saw law and order vanish With our Biddy on a bike.

Tho' in things that are domestic, E'er behindhand—always late— When it comes to breaking records On the wheel she's up to date.

We've no posies in the garden That's presided o'er by Mike, But we've bloomers in the kitchen When they're not on Biddy's bike.

Tho', alas, our bottled beef isn't— Biddy is—quite a la mode. On the range our dinners scorch now While she's scorching on the road.

When long hours we wait the ringing Of our breakfast bell, belike Far away an echo mocks us From the bell on Biddy's bike.

On fate's instrument today, tho', All in vain we vent our ire; When we try to blow up Biddy, Biddy's blowing up her tire.

Fate has got a grudge against us, And—resolving thus to spike All the wheels of life domestic— Mounts our Biddy on a bike!

—Mary Norton Bradford in Boston Globe.

Didn't Agree With Him.

Sinbed—Well, there's one thing we've all got to make up our minds to— we've all got to drop out of life sooner or later.

Keener—Oh, I don't know about that. You may have inherited that style of leaving the world, but most of us strive to avoid the drop if we can. —Boston Courier.

Really Humorous.

"I never laughed so hard in my life Those two fellows who collided both got their collar bones broken."

"You ought to be ashamed of your self."

"Not at all. They were scorchers." — Chicago Record.

The Evening Bulletin, 75 cents per month.

A SUGGESTION TO ARBITRATE.

It Is Wrong to Fight In This Enlightened Age.

The little man with straw colored hair wagged his head indignantly and spluttered incoherent epithets, while the six footer stood off and watched him with an expression of mingled curiosity and vorriment.

"I don't know that I exactly understand what you're saying," the big man remarked slowly. "But I guess I have a pretty good idea of the sentiment. Still we might as well get together and talk it over so's to have everything straight and plain. You said that I had not done half the fighting in the war that I claimed to have done, and I reported that you were so scared you didn't do any."

"Yes, sir; you did. And what's more, you reiterated it. And, not satisfied with that, you said it over."

"And thereupon you called me a liar."

"Yes, sir. And I am sorry, sir, that the company into which I had fallen and the stress of the circumstances betrayed me into the use of a word which should not be in any gentleman's vocabulary. But it's the only one which fits the subject."

"Let's don't bother about that. We're both in the same boat on that trip anyhow. You will remember that I gave way to my instinctive love of repartee and replied that you were another."

"You did exactly that."

"And then you wanted to fight."

"I haven't gotten over wanting to either."

"Still, even if we were to fight, the dispute as to the facts in the case would remain unsettled."

"A man is generally willing to give in when he has been licked," was the dogged answer.

"But it wouldn't be an even thing. I could take you with one hand like a whip cracker and snap the pegs out of your shoes."

The little man looked him over and, quite undaunted, replied:

"You've got a good chance to try."

"I don't want to do it. I dislike to leave unsettled this question of which of us is a mendacious blot on the continent which George Washington once inhabited. All you want, of course, is to have it decided which of us is a liar and which is not."

"That's all that it seems reasonable to expect."

"Suppose, then, that we go ahead and determine the thing in a sportsmanlike fashion. Here's a cent. I'll flip it up. Which'll you take, heads or tails?"

"Heads."

"All right. If it comes up heads, I'm a liar, and if it comes up tails you're a liar."

But the little man with straw colored hair said it seemed a good deal like foolishness for grown men to behave in that way, and he guessed they'd better shake hands and call the whole affair off. —Detroit Free Press.

To Scorchers and Others.

"There are others, but none so good!" THE DINKBOTT'S BICYCLE

IS THE BEST! ! ! ! !

We make tin cans. Why not bicycles?

Having the best equipped tin can factory in the country, we have turned our splendid facilities to the making of bicycles. The result is the same of paramount perfection, the Dinkbott's bicycle.

The highest of high grades for $11.50. Liberal allowance for old wheels of any kind. Even those in your head will be taken in part payment. Why pay $60 for a wheel when you can get the Eureka Canning company's Dinkbott's bicycle for $11.50?

The Dinkbott's bicycle is made of brazed joints, beveled dings and engine capped; turned and drop forged downy; drawn steel sprockets and machine mortised handle bars; National league balls, case hardened spokes; frames of best imported Crooke tubing; all wheels fitted out with pepsin gun tires. A ten years' guarantee with each and every wheel. THE DINKBOTT'S BIKE, $11.50.

One price to all. See that hump? —New York Sunday World.

Why He Held Him.

"What do you want to haul me up for?" protested the cyclist who had been humping himself along the Boulevard. "Why didn't you grab some of those chaps that were scooting past me? They were going at the rate of 20 miles an hour."

"You were the only one I could catch," responded the perspiring policeman, gripping him tighter. —Chicago Tribune.
